E knew he would, prayed he wouldn't and are furious he has. Yes, Dr Brian Mawhinney bit the bullet and made the wrong decision. Coaches over 71/2 tonnes GVW are to be banned from the outside lane of motorways with three or more lanes from 1 January 1996.

The announcement came in answer to an innocuous Parliamentary Question from Cheryl Gillan MP (Chesham and Amersham) but the leaks had softened the blow (Coach and Bus Week, 28 January). However, as with all bad news, it doesn't matter how well you are prepared. the shock is never lessened.

Dare we say that the views of the coach and bus industry have been ignored? What happened to the results of the consultation? The DoT says there was strong support for the ban. Guess who from: The Association of Chief Police Officers, the AA, Magistrates Association, and the Parliamentary Advisory Association for Road Safety.

Excuse us, but the expert bodies in this impressive list seem to lack but one small snippet of knowledge

- how to operate and drive coaches.

Dr Mawhinney concedes that coaches are one of the safest forms of road transport, so why put that record in jeopardy?

The consequences of Dr Mawhinney's decision will leave coaches and their passengers with nowhere to go when the truck in front pulls up quickly and the one behind fails to stop.

His justification is linked to the effects of 65mph speed limiter settings. It is thought that a coach using the outside lane could force car drivers to respond with harsh braking and illegal undertaking manoeuvres.

In a rather bizarre observation the DoT says the outside lane has historically been restricted to vehicles that can legally travel at 70mph. Yet this Spring the south western segment of the M25 is to be the first motorway with variable speed limits to control congestion. If traffic is heavy the limit will be cut from 70mph to 60mph or even 50mph.

For those who draw consolation from the inference that the ban is a trial - think again. The ban will be reviewed as soon as two years' accident data are available. That will almost certainly take longer than two years to accumulate and in any case it's heads Dr Mawhinney wins, tails we lose. Motorway U-turns are illegal.

Trading as MTL (Manchester) Ltd of Edge Lane, Liverpool, the company pleaded guilty to eight specimen offences and was fined £300 per offence and ordered to pay £100 costs.

A traffic examiner had spotted a defective speedometer on an MTL Manchester bus on 14 September. The court heard he had gone on to check all MTL buses he saw that day at various locations and eight out of 10 had defective speedos.

Drivers told the traffic examiner that, when they complained of defective speedometers, they had been told they were not required on scheduled routes.

USING buses with defective pansion into Manchester had been the source of its problems. It had inherited a lot of elderly vehicles and speedometers had been a prevalent defect mainly because of the long drive cables between the transmission and the instrument. These were prone to break and difficult to replace.

It was not accepted that drivers were encouraged to go out with defective speedos. The drivers all had defect forms to fill in. Two buses were currently off the road with faulty speedos and would not be used again until repaired.

There were 30 different types of speedometer and the process of diagnosing, ordering and fitting was a slow one as it was not possible to stock all parts.

MTL had taken delivery of 13 new vehicles and had 15 on order at a cost of £95,000 each with the intention of putting safer vehicles into Manchester.

THE Motorways Traffic (England and Wales) (Amendment) Regulation 1995 laid before Parliament bans coaches weighing more than 7.5 tonnes from the outside lane of motorways with three or more lanes from 1 January 1996.

From that date coaches first registered after 1 January 1988 will be limited to a maximum speed of 65mph as a consequence of EC Directive 1992/96. Prior to that date all British coaches first registered after 1 April 1974 are required to have limiters set at 70mph. The motorway speed limit for coaches remains at 70mph.

The Scottish Office is to introduce Regulations to bring the changes into effect in Scotland.

Industry hopping mad at lane ban

"MISGUIDED, ineffective and restrictive" was the coach industry response to the Department of Transport's announcement banning coaches from using the outside lane of Britain's motorways with three or more

Speaking on behalf of the Coach Industry Action Group, the trade body representing coach operators and manufacturers, John Slatcher, managing director of Shearings, said: "The Government has presented no technical or statistical argument for this restriction.

'Indeed, a recent

Royal Commission Report on transport identified coaches as the most efficient users of road space.

"To ban their use of the overtaking lane makes no sense at all.

"While a coach speed limit at 100km/h (62mph) has existed for some years in Europe, there is no M-way outside lane restriction on coaches in any other part of

"It will mean coaches being sandwiched between heavy goods lorries in the centre lane, denied the safety and convenience of overtaking in congested or slow-moving situations."

Mr Slatcher condemned the ban as illogical. He predicted: "Its adverse effects on the industry and, more importantly on its passengers, will quickly become clear.'

spokesman Stuart Render said the company was "extremely disappointed" with the third-lane ban.

"The coach industry in the last few years has worked extremely hard to keep coach travel as one of the safest modes of surface

"We feel that, if the Government wishes to

"What is really annoying is that National Express took three months putting together a carefully considered submission against the third-lane ban, and this appears to have been completely ignored by the Government.

"There is also a misconception that the actual speed limit for coaches will be reduced to 65 mph - this is not the case, as the limit remains at 70 mph."

tor general of the Confederation of Passenger Transport ment's proposed ban on coaches using the outside lane of motorways as totally unjustified on safety, economic or environmental grounds.

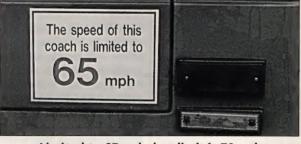

'This is real motorway madness," said Mrs Palmer. "If the Government really wants to improve road safety, it should tackle the prob-and of banning them from the third lane will be to turn it into a speedtrack. Transport Secretary Dr Brian Mawhinney has created a Speeders' Charter."

In May 1994, the Department of Transport commenced consultation on the possibility of banning coach-will be restricted to 65mph.

To evaluate the effects of such a ban, CPT commissioned independent consultants Wootton Jeffreys to undertake a research study. Their report was submitted to the Government. It rejected the proposal on safety, economic and environmental grounds.

lore accidents, decline and pollution

THE CPT replied to the Govern- four per cent of accidents involving ment's outside lane ban consultation paper in the light of Wootton Jeffreys research. It predicted more serious accidents, economic decline and increased pollution.

An increase in accidents involving heavy goods vehicles is one of the CPT's main concerns. It says the Government admits there are no real safety grounds for a ban: "If such a ban were introduced there could be more severe accidents because any accident that did occur would be more likely to involve heavy goods vehicles rather than

DoT figures for 1992 show that

HGVs resulted in deaths as opposed to one per cent overall.

The CPT says the industry believes there will be inevitable bunching in the second lane caused by slower-moving HGVs travelling at 56mph, increasing the hazards of serious and fatal accidents to coach and bus passengers.

Furthermore, the chances of a shunt involving HGVs, coaches and cars are increased since many coaches will be trapped in the second lane, unable to move into the third lane.

The Government also admits: "Overall the disbenefits to coach opban would outweigh the benefits to car users."

In its reply CPT said the combination of slower speeds and confinement to the first and second lanes would increase coach journey times

Some journeys currently carried out by a single driver would require a second driver because of the extra time. These factors would raise operating costs, the CPT said, which would be passed on to the customer in the form of increased fares and/or curtailed or terminated services.

Consequently CPT predicts the most likely to be affected are south erators and passengers from a lane west England, parts of the Scottish Highlands, and parts of Wales (already poorly served by public transport), all areas heavily dependent on tourism. Withdrawal of service in these areas would have a devastating effect on their economies.

On the environment the CPT says the combined consequences of slower journey times and reduced service will be to force more cars on to the road, negating the Government's aim of reducing dependence on the car and of increasing the use of public transport. Polluting emissions will be raised, whereas increased coach use and reduced car use would reduce emissions. CBW

Disapproval

GMPTA policy committee chairman Jack Flanagan has registered his disapproval of the M63 widening proposal. He said: "The sheer bloody-mindedness of this Government is unbelievable. They still propose to pour millions of pounds into unnecessary road schemes while starving public transport of the investment it needs."

Hail-and-ride

CUSTOMER research has shown good passenger acceptance of Leaside Buses' new hail-andride service 192. Research carried out for the former LBL company (now part of the Cowie Group) showed that all customers who returned their survey forms found the overall quality of the route "very good" or "excellent."

Targets met

BUSES in London met Government targets for mileage and reliability of low-frequency services in the four weeks to 10 December. The reliability of high-frequency routes was the only target not achieved in this period. The proportion of mileage operated and the amount of mileage lost due to traffic congestion were similar to the previous four years and the same period last year.

Safety panel

GREATER Manchester PTA policy committee has set up a safety panel to keep the issue of personal safety for transport users under review. PTA member Maureen Rowles said: "We are never complacent about such issues and have set £4 million aside to invest in bus and rail stations."

STEER Davies Gleave's market research division SDG Research has been commissioned by the Highways Agency to measure the satisfaction of road users with 6,600 miles of motorway and trunk roads in England. The study is the first of a series designed to monitor service delivery against the standards of the Road Users Charter.

COACH AND BUS

Peace in the north west

By Andrew Jarosz

HEAD-to-head competition between employee-owned GMS Buses of Stockport and Stagecoach Ribble of Preston in two areas of the north west is set to end next month.

Both companies are reviewing their competitive services which have been in action for over 12 months. GMS is withdrawing its X43 from Manchester to Burnley, set up in direct retaliation to the introduction of the Stagecoach Manchester branded operation on the 192 service from Manchester to Hazel Grove.

Stagecoach is also reviewing its fares and services on the so-called 'Kwiksave' 192 service and an operational cut from 23 vehicles to 13 is expected (see story below).

GMS commercial director Ross Griffiths said the two sets of changes were purely co-incidental and the decision to withdraw the X43 service was taken on business grounds.

"We were having some difficulties in operation, given the route was far out of our normal territory," Mr Griffiths said. Continuing the service would have required more investment in newer vehicles and staffing.

"After 10 months of operating the route, we had to stand back and look at the future. Clearly it would have cost far more in obtaining newer vehicles and arranging appropriate engineering and staffing cover," he said.

GMS' response had failed to generate the same amount of business as the Stagecoach services which were enhanced, although the competition had cost the incumbent considerable revenue loss.

Competition brought Stagecoach fares down to the point where Ribble was drafting in additional coaches, but had to treble its revenue to keep takings stable.

Fares had tumbled on the two companies' services to the point where a day return from Burnley to Manchester cost 95p with Stagecoach and 99p with GMS. Season ticket prices also fell on the Stagecoach services with monthly tickets down to £26 from £80 and annual tickets down to £277 from

Ribble md Michael Chambers said the passenger base had doubled to over one million per year fares charged 12 and months ago would be consigned to history.

"We doubled the service from every half hour and still overloaded and had to run duplicates. Fares will probably rise a bit and inevitably we will lose the casual passenger but many will realise they've been getting a bargain and will continue to travel with us," Mr Chambers said.

BUS

Ribble to have 'strategic rethink'

STAGECOACH subsidiary Ribble is reviewing its Stagecoach Manchester initiative - 12 months after launching the totally new package on the 192 service from Manchester to Hazel Grove in competition with GMS Buses.

Ribble md Michael Chambers described the process as a "strategic rethink of our south Manchester operation.

"We need to downsize it to get the returns we deserve," he said.

Ribble had introduced 16 Volvo B6 buses, based at the premises of a Volvo Truck dealer in Bredbury, and operated a 10-minute service from 7am to 7pm, Mondays to Saturdays. Fares were lower with the Manchester to Stockport fare of 60p undercutting GMBS' £1.15.

Subsequently, services were extended into the evening and continuing fare competition led to the introduction of a prepaid £2 weekly ticket, capable of being (unofficially) transferred between passengers. Vehicle changes led to the midibuses being replaced by higher capacity B10M single deckers, with an occasional double decker on Saturdays. The 23 buses currently operating the 192 will reduce to 13 and fares are expected to rise, although Mr Chambers said they would still be priced competi-

"The demand for a high-quality service has been proved but, if we are to look at providing new vehicles every year, we need to strengthen the receipts," he said.

Patronage on the Stagecoach 192 service had risen from 150,000 per period to around 400,000, extrapolating at five million in a full year. Mr Chambers said that, inevitably, there would be job losses but the company was hoping to relocate well-trained staff to other Ribble de-

Out with the old...

A COMPLETE modernisation of Manchester-based British Bus subsidiary Bee Line is under way with 50 MCW Metrobus deckers hired for three years from West Midlands Travel.

Bee Line has either withdrawn or transferred Leyland Atlantean deckers between 15 and 20 years old. The double-deck fleet is now all less than 15 years old, with some Volvo Citybuses transferred from North Western being less than six vears old.

Managing director Bob Hind said the company planned to dispose of some of the ancient vehicles. "Some of our buses are over 20 years old and I'm pleased British Bus is investing in new vehicles to help me bring down the fleet age."

He said the hire of the WMT Metrobuses was an opportunity to rationalise. "We are allocating vehicles by type and Manchester has all the Metrobuses. One North Western depot had 34 vehicles of 11 different types and there are good savings to be made if individual garages are not faced with a multitude of types to look after."

GO-AHEAD Group subsidiary Shaws Coaches has updated its fleet with the purchase of six Plaxtonbodied Dennis Dart 40 seaters, which have lifted the average age of the fleet from 14 years to nine.

The company, which was purchased by the group in 1992, was originally based at Cragghead, but is now operated as a General's Chester le Street depot.

It faced a traffic commissioner's public inquiry in December at which it was confirmed the fleet was being updated and new maintenance arrangements were in place.

Go-Ahead Group's commercial director Chris Moyes confirmed that nine low-cost unit at Northern Dennis Darts were bought from stock at Plaxton's and that the first 17 of an order for 120 Marshall-bodied Darts were now in service with other subsidiaries.

> Mr Moyes said: "Since taking over Shaws, we've made a lot of changes and have probably replaced everyone of the vehicles that were acquired in the original purchase."

Bova sales trebled in 1994

OFFICIAL figures for coach registrations in 1994 confirm the re-emergence of Bova as the leading supplier of heavyweight integral coaches in the UK.

Bova increased its UK market share almost fourfold from 1.7 per cent to 6.6 per cent with 55 vehicles registered during the year, and more than tripled sales made during the last two vears.

In reality the figures are even higher. Since its launch at the 1993 Motor Show nearly 70 new Bova models have been sold in 12 months, an achievement for both Bova UK, a division of Optare, and main dealer Moseley PCV.

The new Futura range embodies the updated HD, with R66 structural changes, a higher powered Euro 1 low-emission engine, new seating and the computercontrolled 'Futurair' heating system

The Futura Club meets the needs of operators for a tour coach to top-of-therange specification, with double glazing and reclining seats as standard, and the Futura Express is an interurban version of the Club, offering additional versatility, without compromising quality.

Optare's managing director Russell Richardson predicted higher sales for 1995. "The new range of quality vehicles is now receiving the recognition it deserves."

In brief

■ THE Futura Express is the latest in the Bova range to offer highquality engineering with heavyweight components. Full air suspension and front disc brakes, are standard along with the Cummins C series 8.27-litre engine coupled to a ZF 5HP-500 automatic gearbox or manual six-speed unit. The 'Express package' still includes double glazing, luggage racks and both forced air ventilation and ducted warm air. Designed as a versatile interurban coach, the first has been taken by Reading Trans-

■ NEW customers for 1994 included Limebourne Travel, with a £2 million contract from Trafalgar Tours for incoming American tourist work in Europe and the UK. Four Futura Clubs, and four FHD Highliners were supplied through Moseley. Trafalgar approved the Bova for its contracts after a thorough evaluation process.

■ PRODUCTION of Bova Coaches is increasing significantly with 350 units being planned for 1995. The upturn in the European market together with increased sales in non-EC countries, means the company can offer an increased range of coaches to the UK. The first Cummins-engined Club, new for 1995, has been delivered to Boultons of Shropshire.

■ TRANSCONTINENTAL operator White Eagle Lines has moved up from chartering coaches to operating its own with its first highspecification Futura FHD. The London to Warsaw express route now carries more than 10,000 passengers per year on over 250 departures with load factors of 89 per cent and more. The 49 seater has Sable Royal Class recliners, air conditioning, as well as toilet, servery, telephone and video monitors, ideal for the 26-hour trip.

■ REPEAT orders for 1995 include a number of well known operators, some of whom purchased their first Boya coaches last year. Wilfreda of Doncaster, Johnsons of Warwickshire, Priory of Gosport and Biss Brothers of Bishop Stortford already have a number in service. Flights Travel of Birmingham, which purchased eight 44-seat FHDs for its airport express network, is also taking more in 1995.

Euro bodies for Traction

By Andrew Jarosz

BARNSLEY-based Yorkshire Traction has received five Scania FlexCi single deckers — the first with East Lancs' new European-style body. They follow five similar Northern Counties-bodied vehicles said to be delivering exceptional fuel economy.

The L113CRL FlexCis feature a 480mm low frame powered by the 230bhp Scania DSC Euro 2 engine driving a ZF four-speed automatic transmission. The four-speed gearbox was specified by Traction following average fuel consumption figures of 8.3 mpg on the first five L113CRLs.

The 11.8-metre bodywork is fitted with 52 seats and has a flat floor for over half of its length. The entrance step height is 320mm but can be lowered a further 120mm using the kneeling mechanism.

Sideways-facing seats have been eliminated using back-to-back seating but the wide gangway could accommodate wheelchairs if required.

Traction now operates 25 Scania single deckers, bodied by four manufacturers.

Chairman and md Frank Carter commended the FlexCi for its low floor line as being a real boon to passengers with mobility difficulties. "The fuel economy has been exceptional because of the right drive-line configuration and a 55mph maximum speed which ensures the top gear is not overdriven."

The company has allocated the five buses to Wombwell depot, where they have upgraded the services linking Barnsley, Mexborough and Doncaster now branded as the Dearne Valley Link.

BUS

First commercial guided bus

GRT'S subsidiary, Eastern Counties, launched the UK's first commercially-run guided bus system in Ipswich this week (Coach and Bus Week, 21 January).

Superoute 66 uses six Plaxton-bodied Dennis Darts fitted with guide wheels for operation along a section of dedicated concrete busway.

Eastern Counties has invested just under £500,000 in the £2million scheme which is jointly funded with Suffolk County Council and the Department of Transport.

Features on the route include unique bus stop docking and real-time passenger information which comes on stream by April.

Timetable publicity for the route includes the first application of Pindar's personalised bus stop displays > (Coach and Bus Week, 7 January 1995).

Using a modem link with Suffolk County Council, Pindar's Aylesbury staff have access to the county's own database.

It has produced two-colour leaflets for distribution to the county-wide network of publicity outlets. In addition the data is the source of route diagrams, fare information and departure information on more than 85 colour bus stop displays Superoute 66.

DoT updates advice guide

THE Department of Transport has published updated advice to the operators of voluntary minibus passenger transport.

Now updated for the first time since publication in 1988, the Guide to Passenger Transport Provided by Voluntary Groups provides information about the minibus permit system and covers such issues as:

- The legal requirements
- A recommended maintenance regime
- Arrangements for safe operation
- Safe driving practices

The guide complements the Code of Good Practice produced by the Community Transport Association last year.

Transport minister Steven Norris said: "Permit buses have maintained a very good record of safety over the years, but there is always room for improvement as far as road and vehicle safety is concerned."

• Three employees of Central and Fife Regional Councils have passed the new IAM minibus driving test after an intensive two-day driving assessors' course.

Solution to a problem

A LOW-cost bus time and route management system has been developed to allow service monitoring without using on-street inspectors or costly permanent electronic installations.

Solution Products Systems has devised equipment comprising a battery-operated transmitter which logs 'badged' buses. The transmitter, with vandal-proof 265007.

casing, is bolted to the bus stop and logs each bus in its long-term memory for later retrieval.

The equipment can be rented or purchased. The makers also offer a complete turnkey operation of equipment, installation and running the system.

By Andrew Jarosz

Managing director Bob cashire-bodied Dennis Hind said: "It's arguable if there will ever be an ideal vehicle to cope with the intense operation on the Busway but these buses are already proving popular on the longer services.

"North Western is expecting a further 48 Dennis Darts during the year for service in Liverpool, in addition to 39 full-size buses earmarked for the Warrington Goldline operation.

SHRINKING sports and social club group numbers and vehicle manoeuvrability persuaded Low Fell Coaches of Gateshead to buy this Plaxton Beaver-bodied Mercedes 814D, 33seat midicoach from Kirkby. Optare boost at Crosville Cymru BRITISH Bus subsidiary Crosville Cymru has boosted its bus operation on the main track services from Rhyl to Chester with four new Optare Vectas.

The 43-seat MAN-chassied buses have joined a number of Leyland Lynxes on services from north Wales and are being evaluated on routes from Rhyl.

Managing director John Rimmington described them as an attractive proposition: "There's no doubt that the MAN is a premium chassis and we like their Alusuisse construction," he said.

The Vectas are the first new large buses for Crosville Cymru since 1989, when two Optare Deltas with similarly constructed Alusuisse bodywork were purchased.

Mr Rimmington described the Deltas as "extremely solid reliable vehicles" which have already clocked up 700,000 kilometres in service.

Acquisition of 14 Leyland Lynxes from Colchester Transport and an additional four from Pan Atlas has enabled the company to transfer some of its Leyland Nationals and National Greenways to other British Bus companies from its trunk routes. which had been converted from minibus operation after four years. The full-size intake has also enabled a cascade of buses through the fleet resulting in replacement of 21seater minibuses.

By the end of the 1980s, Crosville Cymru had converted most of its local services to minibus operation as well as some trunk routes, and small buses vastly outnumbered conventional vehicles. Second-hand purchases, mostly of double deckers, route re-conversions and a withdrawal of most of the Freight Rover and Iveco minibuses have now changed the fleet balance back toward large

Mr Rimmington said some of the services had encountered capacity problems on Deeside and the additional vehicles enabled a further enhancement of services.

"Both passengers and drivers have reacted favourably to the introduction of larger vehicles and we are now in a position to offer brand new buses as part of the enhancement package," he said. CBW

The London Borough of Haringey has contributed £170,000 for Countdown signs on route 144 and at other bus stops in the borough, while Islington has invested £50,000 to help upgrade infrastructure at the Nag's Head junction of Holloway Road.

Reaction overwheli

PASSENGER reaction to a pioneering once a minute. Countdown system on route 18 has been overwhelmingly positive, according to research conducted by London Transport Buses.

LTB found:

- Ninety-eight per cent of passengers found Countdown information clear and easy to see and reported no problems with the system.
- About 70 per cent of passengers refer to the screen when they arrive at the stop and 90 per cent look at the sign while they wait. About 60 per cent claim they look at the display at least

- Passengers approved of the three essential items of information provided by Countdown; route number, destination and time next bus arrives. Some base line messages sent out by Countdown staff and service controllers were not so well understood, and LTB says care needs to be taken that these are always clear.
- Countdown appeared to make passengers more comfortable about waiting. Sixty five per cent said they had waited less time after the introduction of Countdown. Eighty three per cent said time seemed to pass more quickly when they knew how long the wait would be and the display made the wait more acceptable to 89 per cent of people.

- Attitudes towards bus travel improved. Sixty eight per cent of people said they now had a higher opinion of bus travel, 54 per cent a higher opinion of the operator and 45 per cent a higher opinion of London Transport.
- Passengers were prepared to pay a premium (more than 20p per journey) to have Countdown. Passenger figures and revenue are up on route 18. CBW

Sheerness-Vlissingen route set to rise from the ashes

A NEW passenger ferry service is being launched on defunct Olau Line's Sheerness-Vlissingen route in ear-

Mersey Docks and Harbour Company is to grow the freight business it started last Summer from the Kent port by chartering two ro-ro ships for the southern North Sea sailings.

The service may be exactly what operators have been looking for. Md Bill Moses said he regarded the coach trade as very important to the route and it would be targeted with prices 10 per cent to 15 per cent lower than competing services.

"Coach operators will, for instance, use our day sailings," said Mr Moses, who has worked for Sealink, Hoverspeed and Olau.

assport changes warning

THE UK Passport Agency has warned coach operators of changes starting 1 March, when the British Excursion Document for short trips is being abolished.

The makeshift pass often used for French shopping trips is not the only victim. From 1 January, 1996, the British Visitor's Passport also becomes history, and will not be accepted by the Spanish authorities even earlier, from 1 October, 1995.

The UKPA has strongly advised visitors to take advantage of their offices' quiet Spring period to order a new, £18 ten-year passport. To get the message across to coach passengers, it has produced leaflets announcing the end of the BED, another for the BVP. and A2 or A3 posters relating to the BVP, available from Stephen Jones, fax 0171 271 8813, or write to Room 332, The Passport Office, Clive House, London SW1H 9HD

A visitor's eye view

By Mike Morgan

WITH the British Travel Trade Fair only a few weeks away, one of the show's regular visitors, Stuart Appleby, managing director of Appleby's Coaches, explained why 22 and 23 March are firmly ringed on his calendar.

"I've been going to the show every year since it started as MOOT, and I've watched it grow. The quality and range of exhibitors from all over the UK has improved over the years and it has become a really useful event for anyone in the coach business with tours to plan," Mr Appleby said.

"BTTF is a good chance for me to meet the people who manage the attractions that our tours visit - or might visit in the future."

His family-owned company, based in Louth, has been in business since 1913 and now has a staff of 250 and a fleet of 90 coaches and buses. It operates an extensive programme of excursions and tours in the UK and on the Continent

Mr Appleby expects his round of the stands at BTTF '95 to support his 1995 programmes and help in planning 1996 tours.

He welcomes the fact there will be even more exhibitors at this year's show and is looking forward to discussing next year's prices and facilities. The more information he can pick up at the show, the better, he says:

Some attractions and hotels do plan ahead and let us have their rates well in advance, but others still need educating. They don't realise that, by March, we are already working on brochures for the coming Winter and following Summer."

Stuart Appleby

one Mr Appleby expects will be raised at the BTTF '95 seminar Why Do Coaches Pass Me By?, which he is chairing

Some are smaller hotels and attractions trying to break into the market and some are new attractions still in the planning or building stages

Mr Appleby will also be finding time for the social side of BTTF '95 where many exhibitors will be hosting events for buyers.

"You might as well join in. Tourism is a sociable business and you never know who you might meet," he said.

Is VAT rumour true or is it an April Fool's Day spoof?

Our tour brochure is now being distributed and we are taking bookings. Is it true we are going to be liable for VAT on the transport after 1 April 1995?

Yours is typical of several questions posed since the publication of misleading reports about the effect of the Value Added Tax (Transport) Order 1994 (S.I. 1994 No. 3014).

The effect of the order is to remove from zero rating "transport of passengers to, from or within a place of entertainment, recreation or amusement or of cultural, scientific or historical interest, by the person, or a person connected with him, who supplies a right of admission to, or a right to use facilities at, such a place."

Also removed from zero rating is transport in a motor vehicle between a car park and an airport passenger terminal by the car park provider or a person connected with him and on aircraft where the flight is advertised or held out to be for entertainment or pleasure rather than transportation from one place to an-

This does not mean, as some have supposed, that travel on a coach to a tourist attraction is to become taxed, for it only applies to travel to or within such places when the travel is provided by the attraction provider or "a person connected with him".

This expression has to be interpreted by reference to the Value Added Tax Act 1994 and might be construed as being something like a partner or associated company. It does not include a coach operator who has contracted to purchase admission tickets.

If you take passengers to, and around, a safari park, the transport remains zero rated but if the safari park owner provided coach transport either just around the park itself, or on public roads from, say, a local bus station, to go just to, or also around, the safari park, this would be taxable at the standard rate.

Likewise, an operator who provides, under a hire contract, a bus service between a car park and an air terminal retains zero rating status. If, however, the operator also provided the car parking facility, standard rate will apply to the transport after 1 April.

Therefore, this order has no direct effect whatsoever on most PSV operators.

There may, however, be a fringe effect: the cost of 'rides' whether in amusement parks or on preserved railways - are likely to rise because of this, and this may manifest itself in increased ticket charges. Yet, while pleasure flights will now attract tax, pleasure cruises appear to have escaped unscathed.

If a holiday hotel is regarded by Customs & Excise as being a place of 'entertainment, recreation or amusement' - which would appear quite probable although not certain - and the hotelier himself provides transport to the hotel with vehicles owned or operated by him or a person associated with him, the transport would be standard rat-

If the hotelier contracted with a coach operator to provide transport there would be no change from the present situation for the operator but my best guess is the hotelier would be liable to pay VAT at standard rate on both the transport and the accommoda-

As your question was about VAT on tours it might be appropriate to mention that, from 1 January 1996, all of the margin on sales which fall within the Tour Operator's Margin Scheme will be taxed at standard rate. At present the part of the margin relating to zero-rated sales was itself zero rated. You will need to take this into account in pricing next year's brochure!

I operate a trust account for package tour sales. Does the trustee have to hold the travel insurance premium sold as part of the package?

AT, Kent

The regulation requires the trustee to hold "all monies paid over by a consumer...for a relevant package." While one interpretation would be that this meant anything and everything paid, the alternative view is that 'relevant package' limits it to the money relating to a package as defined by the regula-

This point has not been determined by a court but my view (with which the Department of Trade and Industry does not disagree) is that the trustee only has to hold money relating to the supply of "transport, accommodation and other tourist services not ancillary to transport and accommodation and accounting for a significant portion of the package" and that this definition (taken from the Regulations) does not embrace insurance.

Although insurance may be sold with, and is complementary to, a package, my best view is that it is really a separate contract. It is not something to be enjoyed later as part of a holiday package, its benefits begin as soon as the premium is paid and the premium does not require protection as it is, in essence, non-refundable.

If you do not want the trustee to hold on to insurance premiums you will either need to get the client to pay this to you separately (as the main payment should, of course, be made out to the trustee); or you will need to satisfy the trustee he has no duty, or even power, to retain the insurance premium element until the package is fully executed, ie that he should transfer the premium element straight back to you.

If I were a trustee faced with such a request I would want to be satisfied that the premium charged to the customer was no more than the premium paid by the operator to the insurer, plus just a reasonable level of commission. As you are doubtless aware, some parts of the package holiday industry advertise low prices but charge inflated rates for compulsory insurance.

Does a bus operating a registered local service have to Carry a first-aid kit?

SB, Norfolk

Under the Construction & Use Regulations a vehicle being used to provide a local service does not have to carry a first-aid kit. But one could be required under the terms of a local authority transport contract.

The Health and Safety Executive has also been known to insist on first-aid equipment being available on rural services where assistance could be miles away.

Clapton Bus Garage conductor Duke Baysee has been busy carving out a career as a rap singer.

Give credit to those who listen

From George Peach

SIR

HUMPS IN - BUSES OUT Your campaign (Coach and Bus Week, 10 December) is timely as an industry-wide response is called for but we should be prepared to give credit, too, when highways department staff listen to our concerns.

In Wakefield Metropolitan District, a number of proposals for humps met with a frosty response from ourselves and other bus operators. However, the highways department was inundated with requests for traffic calming. Several designs of humps were constructed at one of their depots for us to try out. Even those acceptable to the emergency services caused us problems

We agreed to take part in a longterm trial of a modified hump (referred to as a "thump") and which was subsequently the subject of the Department of Transport's Traffic Advisory Leaflet 7/94 published last October.

Part of our monitoring consisted of keeping the same six minibuses on the routes affected (big buses are relatively infrequent and were not monitored) and comparing their maintenance costs with the rest of the fleet.

Problems began to appear after

Humps in, buses out about four months and we were able to identify parts of the suspension (for example) which were wearing out within one-third of the manufacturer's warranty period.

We demonstrated to officers and council members that, after six months, these six minibuses were incurring routine maintenance costs some 85 per cent higher than the company average. Had the experiment continued, we would have had to give serious consideration to adjusting our inspection cycle from three-weekly to two-weekly

From the Highway Department's view, the scheme was a great success but it reluctantly agreed to remove the humps (we'll brush over our threat to withdraw the bus services and how we came to be pushing letters through several hundred letterboxes in the area on Christmas Eve 1993!).

Suffice to say council officers considered a variety of alternatives and accompanied us on a tour of traffic-calming schemes in various parts of Yorkshire and, yes, they sat on the back seat of a minibus as we bumped over cushions and humps. I am happy to tell you the council is replacing the humps with chicanes.

There are several lessons for bus operators to learn.

Firstly, when police, fire and ambulance authorities, as well as the Department of Transport, give humps their blessing, it takes courage by local council officers to take a bus operator's view to the point of overturning a traffic-calming scheme (well done, Wakefield!).

Secondly, many of us have used minibuses to get into roads previously unserved by buses. In many cases it is these same roads where residents are calling for traffic calming. This presents local authorities with a dilemma and the (possibly ill-considered) advice from the Department of Transport does seem to help buses.

Further than this, with local authorities now being encouraged to adopt the 'package approach' in their TPP bids, highway officers need our help. We also need to get involved in the long-term view by examining the detail of the unitary

Competition yes, but bully-boy tactics no

From David Greenwood

SIR

I learn with increasing dismay and incredulity of the activities within the British bus industry which appear to be moving the industry ever closer to monopoly.

During 1984/85 in various forums, large and small, I sat and listened to the then Secretary of State Nicholas Ridley who consistently elucidated the virtues of his twin credos, competition and efficiency.

Within a short time Ridley's legislation began to bite but not in the way he had proposed and I knew of a highly-efficient and profitable company which was attacked by an unprofitable one, the owner of which said his aim was to put the other company out of business.

Not many years later, and after I had left the country, he achieved that aim and it was noteworthy then and remains so, that many far less efficient companies survived by virtue of their size rather than their performance.

More recently a number of old-established independent bus companies have capitulated to the emerging giants and it has been apparent from their own statements that at least some sold out rather than face the unpalatable alternative.

Some of the tactics employed by the larger groups have left many professionals, including many within those groups who dare not speak out, dismayed and disgusted by the audaciousness of the aggressors.

What surely is particularly distasteful to most professionals, whatever their allegiance, is the profligate destruction of good, efficient and profitable companies which are or were providing excellent services, by those who have no need to pursue such dissolute tactics, whose aims are unashamedly not good healthy competition, but who are motivated merely by avarice.

I sat through much of the committee stage of what became the Transport Act 1985 and I have little doubt that the wanton destruction of the fabric of the industry and the establishment of powerful anti-competitive groups was furthest from Parliament's collective mind.

However, the most loathsome aspect of recent developments is that the large groups are not attacking where business is good, but where they may sustain corporate bloody noses. Nor are they attacking each other's territory, they are doing what the bullies in the school playgrounds do, attacking the small and those they perceive to be weak.

I know I am not alone in finding such behaviour despicable and I frequently ask myself why no one is prepared to fearlessly enunciate publicly what so many are saying privately, but currently, it seems to me industry professionals are prepared to continue emulating Nero.

The time has surely come, for a line to be drawn between what is healthy competition and what are bully-boy tactics and there is an urgent need for a collective screaming from the roof tops that enough is enough, that large companies deliberately setting out to put small ones out of business is just not acceptable.

There has always been a role for small companies as well as for large ones but, unless the present trend abates, unless there is legislation on the lines of the anti-trust laws of the USA, small companies will soon be just a memory and in the process, may I venture to suggest, the beneficiaries will not be the industry's managers, employers or passengers but the City institutions.

Diversification or death wish?

Coaches are your core business but you're also selling rail, sea cruise or even fly-drive holidays. Is it a foot-shooting exercise? Mark Williams reports CCORDING to Excelsior's managing director, Len Clarke, the cruises his company offers are very nearly a loss leader. "Our cruise programme is almost a service for our clients rather than business. It's not very profitable," he said.

"But coaches have many diverse uses and one of them is to take people to cruise liners. I'd say it's short-sighted to say coach operators might lose out.

"Selling cruises certainly hasn't done us any harm. In fact, in combining the two transport services — coach and cruise — I'm sure we've introduced new people to the coach and, after a pleasant trip to the port, they go away thinking what wonderful things coaches are these days," he said.

Excelsior's moderate cruise sales are ideal for the Bournemouth-based operation close to major cruise ports with a local population which has a high proportion of retired and semi-retired holidaymakers who have high disposable income. In short, they also make good prospects for Excelsior's quality coach tour programme.

A vehicle fleet in which all Continental coaches have air conditioning and low seating capacities has helped the firm reach a situation where it avoids trying to compete on price. And Mr

Clarke says the anecdotal evidence of its airport shuttle services suggests there has very likely been a knock-on effect.

"All our coaches carry our tour brochures and I know of occasions when passengers on feeders to airports have booked coach holidays."

Tappins Coaches has no regular links with Eurostar but two trips on to the Waterloo end of the passenger-only city-to-city Eurotunnel rail link proved to tour manager Liz Tappin there is room to explore other transport systems without jeopardising core husiness

"We ran the trips for our theatre club, who wanted to be among the first to take the train to Paris. It was done on an ad-hoc basis and, to be honest, the second trip just before Christmas was not as well supported.

'But I don't think we have anything to fear from mixing the two. Our customers are loyal to us in other respects and, let's face it. when the tunnel opens to coaches, ours will be on the train with the rest," she said.

"It's my view that the reason the first Eurostar trip was such a success is because we have a 50-plus age group of clientele who may not have the confidence to drive into central London on their own.

"We offer not only to provide the driving but a courier to make the trip more pleasant. I view this kind of trip as one of the many things a tour company must offer."

Not that everyone thinks putting coach passengers on the train is a good thing. Sally Ferries' group sales manager Phil Hankin says coaches rarely compete on comfort and, by handing their passengers over to the train, will be forcing them to make a direct com-

And before you say "He would say that, wouldn't he?" Mr Hankin insists it's more an argument in favour of upgrading coach quality. "It may be all right for Wallace Arnold to sell tickets for everything in their travel agencies but if I were Joe Bloggs Coaches, a thriving tour operation, I think I'd be cutting my own throat by selling train tickets.

"Let's face it, trains go faster and are more comfortable. The only strengths of the coach are that it delivers you door to door and very cheaply but, since shuttling people to the train loses you the first of the two, all you have left is selling on price."

Mr Hankin says that, until your coaches can deliver the legroom and comfort of the train, it may be suicidal to package the two together: "I'm a six-footer and, quite frankly, there's no way these days I'd take a long tour on a 49-seater. Drop the seating to 39 and suddenly the same tour would appeal to me."

He admitted playing devil's advocate to some degree but said he felt very strongly that coach operators must be prepared to compete on quality and comfort before they deliver their customers to the loving seats of the train.

That's almost exactly the philosophy of John Slatcher, managing director at Shearings. He says the trick is to focus on the niche market — in much of Shearings work. the over 55s — and deliver a 'care product.'

"Coaches are, and will for the foreseeable future, be our core business. Nonetheless, we offer cruises, fly/cruise packages, coach/air products, self-drive holidays and even travel on the French TGV," he said.

"But I have a simple philosophy. It is not for me to decide how my clientele wants to travel. I will simply offer them the opportunity of choice and broaden the appeal of the holiday and the Shearings name.

"Questionnaires sent out by Shearings have revealed that 30 per cent of my coach customers are taking other forms of holiday. I will try to deliver the same standard of service in those other areas.

"I never want to get into the 'dump and leave' style of air packages and, if possible, I'll try to introduce the coaching element."

A company where pinions matter

Sheila Wetherill: New career

IKE Wetherill had been working for transmission specialist Avon for nearly 14 years. He had quietly harboured the idea of making a go of it by himself. When the company was taken over he decided the time was right.

Five years later he is managing director of an expanding business with £2 million turnover. His confidence was based on an understanding of the close-knit PSV market. He had built up contacts over 20 years and has used this precious database of key people to create the right opportunities.

Mr Wetherill says that his company, Queensbridge (PSV) Ltd, has forged a significant niche in the remanufactured transmis-

All components not to original manufacturer's tolerances and standards are replaced. Some new components have been sourced in Italy, including Routemaster gearbox parts.

Other parts are overhauled in the Queensbridge workshops, which rebuilds over 40 gearboxes, axles and diffs a week.

Queensbridge is located in a geographical area with a wealth of transmission experience. There are other suppliers in the West Yorkshire area and, crucially, the Barnsley breakers with their ready supply of used gearboxes and axles are close by.

Some of the 49 employees are former GKN axle fitters and Mr Wetherill has claimed a number of bus fitters made redundant as the NBC central works concept crumbled. "It's a good area for skilled work," he said

At this point Mr Wetherill's wife, Sheila, changed career and took up the vacant company secretary post. She now does all the computerised accounts.

The company name is derived from its backer, Queensbridge Trucks of London, whose owner, Danny Parman, has a 50 per cent stake. Consequently Queensbridge (PSV) of Ossett has a southern depot in Stepney, east London.

There's tough competition in the PSV transmission world and the Queensbridge pricelist points to some bargains - particularly when compared with advertised prices

> "The days are gone when you could get over £1,000 for a semi-automatic. Unfortunately we don't control the market, consequently you've got to sell the everyday semi automatics on volume and service," Mr Wetherill said.

> Nevertheless, he is very optimistic. "Bulk buying helps because it costs around £600-£650 to recondition a 'box capable of 18-month warranty (two years on a Hydrocyclic)," he said.

"Maybe we score on service and we guarantee a 24-hour service."

Hallamshire Bus Co banned

ALLAMSHIRE banned from operating any local bus services for two months for failing to run a

In addition, North Eastern traffic commissioner Keith Waterworth cancelled the registration for the service concerned - service 277, Doncaster to Sheffield, via Rotherham with immediate effect and ordered the company, of 52 Chesney Road, Glebe Park, Lincoln, to repay 20 per cent of the fuel duty rebate grant received for the service over the past three months.

Maintenance problems led Mr Waterworth to also cut the authorisation on the licence from 10 vehicles to five and the duration to the end of March 1996.

DoT vehicle examiner Peter Moses said he examined three vehicles in November. One had recently passed its annual test and another had been brought from the repair contractors and there was evidence of recent work having been carried out.

The third vehicle came straight off service and he issued it with an immediate prohibi-

Mr Moses said the vehicles were leased and the maintenance facilities were shared with a haulage contractor. There was no evidence that driver defect report books were being used. Inspections varied in frequency between two and five weeks.

The company's commercial manager, Glyn Pegg, said that, around that time, a substantial amount of work was done, and a substantial amount of money spent, on the prohibited vehicle.

After a driver reported a defect the vehicle had been taken out of service. However, the company failed to check it when it returned from the contractor to which it had been sent for repair.

Mr Moses said the work carried out had been to the rear end. The broken main spring had been at the front of the vehicle.

In reply to the commissioner, he said he had difficulty in contacting the company to carry out a maintenance investigation on several occasions

Mr Waterworth said the company must explain to its drivers that, if they failed to use the defect

Mr Pegg said the company would be recruiting a full-time transport manager, one of whose duties would be to ensure the vehicles were maintained at the laid-down intervals.

It would be his task to liaise between the operational and engineering sides.

Tommy Roberts, the company's nominated transport manager, said he had not been able to fulfil his duties for some months due to ill health and he would leave when the new transport manager was appointed.

Questioned by the commissioner, Mr Pegg said service 277 was the company's only registered service. They were not now running a limited-stop Doncaster to Fleetwood service. That service had not been operated as a local service and no fuel duty rebate grant had been claimed in respect of it.

As a result of complaints received about the level of service 277 they had discussions with Hallamshire Bus on several occasions, but the situation did not improve.

Not more than one of the three buses required on the service had been operated. Buses parked up for excessive time in the bus station.

Comments made by the drivers made it clear they were not going to run the service. Asked why they were parked up, drivers said variously that they were waiting for money for diesel, their buses had defects, or that they were taking a break. He had found the company difficult to contact.

Mr Waterworth said survey results produced showed there had hardly ever been a service 277 on the days concerned.

Mr Whittle said the company had attempted to run the service a number of times but they had never managed to run it fully. The best they had achieved was one bus out of the three required. Concern was expressed by intended passengers, particularly in the late

Mr Pegg said it was accepted service levels had not been as good as they should have been. They had to move from their stand at the bus station on the first day of operation. They had difficulty in getting on to the new stand as another bus company used it to park vehicles. Therefore, buses had sometimes had to be driven straight through the bus station.

Mr Whittle said there should be no need to do that as there were PTE staff available to marshal buses. He conceded that, if buses had been driven straight through, they would not have been noted as running by the monitoring staff.

Mr Pegg said the service had a layover time of 30 minutes at Doncaster, but Mr Whittle said the PTE allowed a standing time of 50 minutes.

The mechanical reliability of the company's vehicles was very good, Mr Pegg said, and they had only ever had one breakdown on the road. Their regular drivers regarded the PTE staff as being hostile to Hallamshire Bus.

"I do not personally have that impression," said Mr Whittle.

Mr Waterworth said instances of non-operation had also been noted by Traffic Area staff, but Mr Pegg said that, by the end of October, over 10,000 people had used the service.

The original intention had been to expand to 10 vehicles within weeks of starting. However, because of a number of factors, including a number of key personnel having only worked on a part-time basis, and because of doubts over the company's future, there had been much drift and indecisiveness.

Problems had been caused by the fragmented structure of the company and the shareholding. service 277 would be deregistered immediately in its entirety.

The future intention was to look for opportunities in the market place, for example, tendered services, when confidence in the company had been restored, together with any commercial opportunities that came along.

Now the new shareholding was in place they were seeking to rebuild. Many passengers had been very pleased with the service and had written to the company saying so.

Spot checks had been carried out at the bus station and, by and large, the company's vehicles had passed those spot checks.

In reply to the commissioner, Mr Pegg said the original business plan was not implemented and there had been no sense of direction or organisation.

Financial evidence was heard in private at the company's request.

Mr Pegg said it was a matter of considerable regret their obligations had not been met. The substantial change in shareholding would allow things to develop in a more cohesive manner.

Mr Waterworth said the facts were clear. The Vehicle Inspectorate had identified a number of deficiencies in the past maintenance of the vehicles.

The company had not fulfilled its statement of intention that its vehicles would be kept in a fit and roadworthy condition.

Its performance in terms of maintenance was of concern, but he had noted the proposed changes. As far as service 277 was concerned, he was satisfied there had been a significant failure to operate over a period of time.

The commissioner said he required producing within 28 days:

- A letter from the company's bank relating to the overdraft facilities
- Completed accounts
- A copy of a letter to the company's drivers setting out their responsibilities in regard to defect reporting
- A copy of the nil defect report book that was to

• A job description for the new transport manager.

'Industry cause for concern'

HE taxi industry was an one that frequently gave him cause for concern, said West Midland traffic commissioner John Mervyn Pugh

Mr Pugh (below) granted taxi operator Stephen Friel, trading as Associated Travel, of 36 Mears Drive, Stetchford, Birmingham, a restricted O-licence for two minibuses.

He wanted Mr Friel to maintain his taxis the same way he would be maintaining his minibuses, and not the other way round, Mr Pugh said.

There was an awful tendency, when there was a fleet of taxis and a couple of minibuses, to treat the minibuses like taxis.

Mr Friel said he realised they were different. He would inspect the minibuses himself every six weeks.

Mr Pugh said that was the maximum time there could be between inspections.

Licence duration cut till the end of June

LAENAVON coach operator Eileen Hewitt's O-licence duration has been cut by South Wales traffic commissioner John Mervyn Pugh to expire at the end of June.

Disciplinary proceedings involving Mrs Hewitt, who trades as C and E Travel, of Mount Durand, The Firs, Llanavon Road, Blaenavon, had been previously adjourned pending the outcome of a pending prosecution at Tredegar (Coach and Bus Week, 14 January).

For Mrs Hewitt, Geoffrey Williams said those proceedings had been discontinued. However, there was also a prosecution pending for failing to display a licence identity disc. Mrs Hewitt would be pleading guilty, though she was unaware at the time the disc was missing.

Mrs Hewitt said a prohibition notice for a defective tyre had been lifted without the tyre being changed. She had put the vehicle through an MoT test with the same tyre to prove her judgment was correct.

DoT vehicle examiner Graham Ballard agreed there was an anomaly in that, though the tyre was listed as being below the legal limit, a delayed prohibition had been imposed.

He said he had endorsed the prohibition "S", showing a significant failure in maintenance, because there was a substantial patch of tread below the legal limit. He maintained the type of prohibition imposed was at the discretion of the vehicle examiner concerned.

Suggesting Mrs Hewitt write fresh letters to her drivers, pointing out their responsibilities, Mr Pugh said there were lots of things wrong with her drivers.

"I must rely upon my drivers, and they are fickle people," said Mrs Hewitt. Mr Pugh said Mrs Hewitt was trying desperately hard but she needed to be more authoritative with her drivers.

There would be a further public inquiry in June, when he hoped Mrs Hewitt would prove that her system of maintenance was working well.

However, if there were any further prohibitions that caused him concern in future, she would be back before him earlier and he would be hard put not to take serious action, and this was the last thing he wanted to do.

Busways: Four senior appoint

By Richard Simpson

OUR senior appointments have been made at Stagecoach's Busways autonomous subsidiary after the retirement of md Eric Hutchinson. (Coach and Bus Week, 21 January).

Finance director John Conroy has been promoted to md, while John Regan, 35, has replaced him as finance director and company secretary. Mr Regan was financial controller with the company and joined it in 1987, having previously worked for Deloitte Haskins & Sells.

David Kirsopp, 40, has been appointed chief engineer after transferring from Cumberland Motor Services.

Ian Linsley, 46, has been appointed traffic manager and is responsible to commercial director Peter Nash for all operational matters at Newcastle, South Shields and Sunderland divisions.

WS Coachbuilders post

VG's Bus Division, WS Coachbuilders, is continuing its drive to capture a bigger share of the urban and inter-urban bus market.

Sydney J Smith, 49, has been appointed director of engineering and design. Mr Smith has an impressive track record, with managerial and engineering skills.

His career in vehicle engineering began in 1961 when he joined the

Sydney J Smith

Kenning Organisation as an apprentice motor vehicle technician. This early experience with all kinds of motor vehicles led to a move, in 1967, into automobile production.

At Austin's Longbridge HQ Mr Smith learned basic draughtsman skills which he took with him to Leyland Truck and Bus in 1971.

The following years gave him a valuable foundation in vehicle design and development as well as a > thorough grounding in the transport industry in general.

Next he became a designer, then team supervisor before moving in 1982 to Leyland Bus, Workington, as engineering manager, responsible for total product design.

In 1987 he moved to Hestair-Duple coachbuilders as executive engineering manager, controlling the drawing office and development department.

He then spent two years with NEI Cowans Boyd Cranemakers as project manager for rail products, before joining Walter Alexander coachbuilders, where he was engineering manager, forward projects, and quality manager.
